

Comic strip title: The Flowers' Mysterious Smell

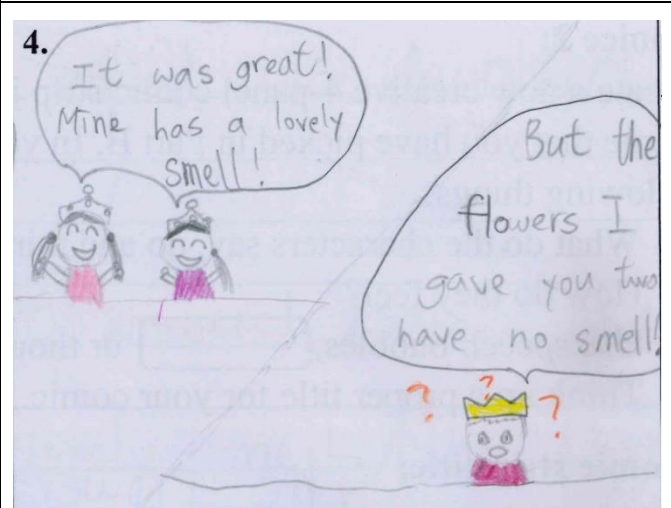

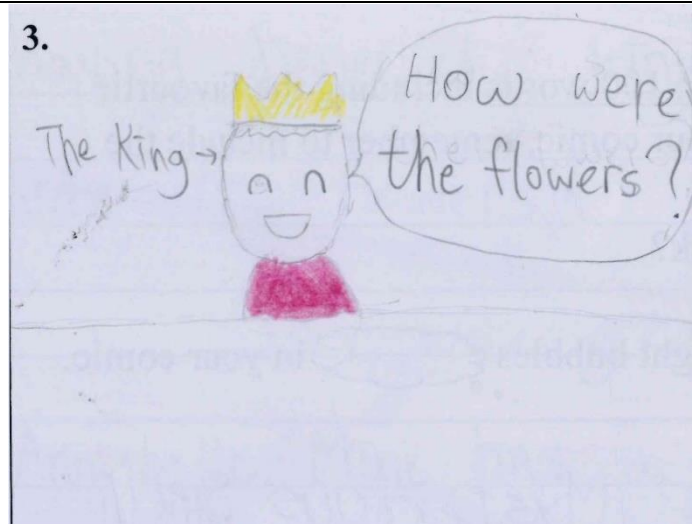

Once upon a time, there were two princesses named Isabelle and Annabelle. They were twin sisters who lived in a kingdom's palace with the King and Queen.

One day, the King gave the princesses two identical special flowers, one for each. Isabelle loved her flower and put it in a vase in her room. Annabelle did the same thing.

But when the twins saw each other's flower, they both thought their sister's flower had a lovely smell, while their own didn't. Therefore, they decided to swap them.

That evening, when the royal family were having dinner, the King asked his daughters, “How were the flowers?”

“They were great!” answered Isabelle and Annabelle. “Mine has a lovely smell.” Isabelle replied joyfully. Annabelle retorted, “No, mine has a lovely smell!” The King was surprised, “But the flowers I gave you two have no smell!”

The two princesses suddenly realized that they were blinded by envy. They apologized to the King for their ignorance. At last, they had learnt to appreciate the beauty in and cherish everything they had.